August 2022 Volume XLVIII, Number 2

Through my decades in public media, I've learned there is nothing quite like the experience of children meeting a PBS Kids character in person. Which is why I am so excited that we're able to bring Daniel Tiger to Champaign-Urbana Days this month. If you have children, grandchildren, or are just young at heart, I hope you'll stop by.

Thanks to a grant from PNC Grow Up Great®, we are able to bring Daniel Tiger in person for Be My Neighbor Day during Champaign-Urbana Days on Aug. 13 at Douglass Park (see page 2). PNC Bank has been a wonderful partner for Illinois Public Media for many years. In fact, we recently received the great news that they are supporting our Book Mentor Project for the 19th year.

Of course, Be My Neighbor Day, our Book Mentor Project, our award-winning youth podcast series (see PMJA awards on page 19), and so much more all happen thanks to our amazing education and outreach team. So, kudos to Kellie Blanden, Kimberlie Kranich, and our amazing volunteers for the great work they do for our community.

I'd also like to acknowledge the efforts of Elaine Harbison who recently passed away. Elaine worked as WILL's director of learning services for nearly 20 years. She was an advocate of our educational programming, and she made an immeasurable impact on generations of children in our community. Illinois Public Media is only able to celebrate our 100th anniversary thanks to the remarkable efforts of current and former staff members like Elaine.

Thanks again for your support of Illinois Public Media. We couldn't do it without friends like you.

COVER STORY

WILL: A place to learn before PBS Kids

By Katie Buzard

Early radio advocates saw the technology's potential to expand upon the University of Illinois' mission as a land-grant institution to inform and inspire the wider public, making education accessible to far more people than ever before. Beginning life as the "University of the Air," WILL has always focused on education.

College lectures and other talks by experts aimed at adult listeners dominated the airwaves during the first few decades. But WILL soon realized radio's potential for broadening the minds of children and began creating educational content just for them.

One such program was the immensely popular children's radio show Stories 'n Stuff, which ran five days a week for 16 years in the 1950s and '60s. When the National Association of Educational Broadcasters moved into Gregory Hall in 1951, Stories 'n Stuff became one of its first nationally distributed programs. The NAEB extended the program's reach beyond central Illinois by shipping tapes of the show to the other stations in its national "bicycle" network. Eventually, a weekly version of Stories 'n Stuff could be heard on 65 radio stations across the country.

The show quickly gained national recognition and received numerous awards throughout its time on air. In 1951, Stories 'n Stuff was awarded first place in the Children's Programs for Out-of-School Listening category at the 15th American Exhibition of Educational Programs held at The Ohio State University. The award cited the show for "going beyond the usual in entertainment and education programs for children, for sensitivity to the taste and interest of children, and for imagination and skill in program planning and production." Another national award in 1958 honored the show "for coordinating educational material with imaginative production techniques to produce a highly entertaining and informative series."

The goal of the program was to teach children ages 5–10 in an engaging and nonpatronizing way. John Regnell, a director and performer on the show, recalled, "We made a conscious effort not to (talk down to children). We talked to them as if they were equals." The "stories" of Stories 'n Stuff were drawn from history, legend, geography, the lives of famous figures, fairy tales, science and invention, customs of other cultures, music, and sports. The "stuff" included songs, poems, jokes, and riddles, underpinned by playful banter between the hosts.

In the early years, the cast, writers, and producers changed relatively frequently, drawing on university faculty, students, WILL staff, and others in the community. However, by 1956, there were three regular hosts that children came to know and love — John, Mary, and Sue (John Regnell, educational program director of WILL; Mary Rausch, program assistant and graduate student in drama; and Sue Rauschenberger, an undergraduate student in speech).

Meet Daniel Tiger at Be My Neighbor Day

Daniel Tiger would like to meet your family! Come to Illinois Public Media's big tent at Champaign-Urbana Days on Aug. 13 at Douglass Park for our Be My Neighbor Day back-to-school event from 11 am to 5 pm.

BE MY NEIGHBOR DAY

Illinois Public Media staff and our partners at Head Start will give away books, dental hygiene kits, and socks for kids, and there will be kid-friendly activities to take home. Daniel Tiger also will be available at select times throughout the day for photographs with your child.

And everyone can practice being a caring neighbor by making a card for a senior citizen, nurse, or teacher. We will distribute these cards locally and post pictures of them on Illinois Public Media's Facebook page.

This event is free and requires no registration. For more information, follow Illinois Public Media on Facebook or email us at will-ed@illinois.edu.

Be My Neighbor Day is powered by PNC Grow Up Great®. We also thank our collaborators at the Champaign Park District and Champaign County Head Start.

A little monkey with an insatiable curiosity

Season 13 brings new episodes of Curious George Fridays at 8 am beginning Aug. 5. The television series is designed to inspire kids to explore science, math, and engineering in the world around them in a fun and entertaining way.

The series takes full advantage of children's natural curiosity, using George to motivate them to expand their own investigations of the world. The series encourages inquiry and curiosity, promotes hands-on exploration, and shows parents and caregivers how to support children's science and math-related play. For more information, visit pbskids.org/curiousgeorge.

The rise and fall of the Boleyn family

When Anne Boleyn, the worldly, charismatic daughter of a leading English courtier, caught the eye of Tudor king Henry VIII in the mid-1520s, few could have foreseen just how far she would rise — and, eventually, fall. The epic three-part series The Boleyns: A Scandalous Family, beginning at 7 pm Sunday, Aug. 28, is a story of love, sex, and betrayal. The series revisits the polarizing queen's story from her family's perspective, offering a more balanced portrayal of the Boleyns through a blend of dramatic reenactments and interviews with leading historians.

Paralympian Jean Driscoll featured

In celebration of WILL's centennial year, we are revisiting some of our most popular and acclaimed locally produced documentaries. This month, Against the Wind airs at 8 pm Monday, Aug. 22, as part of Doc-u-Monday.

American wheelchair racer Jean Driscoll is the first eight-time winner of the Boston Marathon and set five new course records and five world best times. The four-time Paralympian also is a 12-time Paralympic medalist, winning five golds.

Airing at 8 pm Monday, Aug. 22, Against the Wind tells the compelling story of Driscoll's attempt in 1996 to become the first athlete to win seven consecutive Boston Marathons. Following her as she battles her way back from injury, the program examines her mental and physical preparation and the creation of the racing chair that contributed to her victory. A University of Illinois graduate, Driscoll trained in Champaign-Urbana where she was assistant coach of the Illinois wheelchair track and field team.

The documentary was produced by Alison Davis and narrated by author, activist, and journalist Kathrine Switzer, who was the first woman to officially run in the Boston Marathon in 1967.

Major funding for Against the Wind was provided by the Corporation for Public Broadcasting through the Central Educational Network.

SOCIAL JUSTICE LEARNING

Homelessness in America

Current estimates indicate more than half a million people are experiencing homelessness in America. Most of those are individuals — around 70% according to data from before the pandemic hit in 2020 — with a smaller, but still staggering portion being families with children.

These people live in every state and territory and represent the diversity of this country. However, certain people in our society are more likely to find themselves without a place to live. Risk is tied to race, gender and gender identity, sexual orientation, and mental health.

The goal of any social justice learning exercise is to gain a better understanding of others' experiences with the hopes of achieving a more equitable and quality society for all peoples. We hope you will join us in our digital Social Justice Learning space for the second lesson of 2022: Homelessness in America.

It is our hope that through more knowledge about the situation, what it is like to experience homelessness, along with how easily people can find themselves without a home, we can help humanize the crisis and take better care of our neighbors.

Illinois Public Media's Social Justice Learning space is divided into sections for early childhood, adolescents, and adults. Each area features text, video, and audio to facilitate a variety of learning styles. We believe we can keep the conversations and learning going to ensure a lifelong impact. You can start exploring at will.illinois.edu/socialjusticelearning.

SHARE YOUR STORY

Our 100th anniversary is more than a date; it is a once in a lifetime opportunity to share WILL's amazing story with everyone. We hope you'll join us in celebrating this centennial by sharing your own WILL stories and memories at will.illinois.edu/will100/shareyourstory.

"I enjoy listening to the radio in the mornings, and I tune in to WILL-AM to get unbiased news. It's educational, not sensational, and as an employee of the university it's important that I understand what's happening in this state. I also direct my students to public media. Students can sometimes create a bubble for themselves on campus and they cannot live in a vacuum. I encourage them to listen and watch WILL so they can get a good understanding of their environment. I have many international students and WILL is very important to their civic education."

PMJA honors IPM news reporting

Illinois Public Media has been honored by the Public Media Journalists Association for our reporting during 2021. The PMJA awards are designed to honor the very best reporting in a wide variety of categories, and three Illinois Public Media productions were recognized.

The first installment of our annual series State of Change won first place in the Multi-Media Presentation category. Hosted by Tinisha Spain, and produced by Spain and News and Public Affairs Director Reginald Hardwick, State of Change looks at the impact of climate change and adverse weather in Illinois now and in the future. It included farmers racing to protect livestock from rising heat, invasive species on the rise, a Black Illinois farming community's debate over adding natural gas service, and the growing population of the bald eagle in Illinois.

"Tinisha Spain, Dana Cronin, and a team of photojournalists traveled across the state for our inaugural edition of State of Change. The stories were beautifully told and based in science," Hardwick said.

A product of a long-standing partnership between Illinois Public Media and the University of Illinois Laboratory High School, Immigrants' Journeys: Challenges and Opportunities in Champaign-Urbana won second place in the Student Multi-Media

Presentation category. Students from Uni High produced and hosted the podcast and on-air special. It explored individual immigrants' journeys to central Illinois as well as those who have become advocates for immigrants' rights.

"The best part of my job is working in collaboration with young people and their teachers to help tell stories about our community," said Kimberlie Kranich, director of engagement and educational outreach at Illinois Public Media. "This award is one symbol of the success of that work. I am so proud of these students."

And The 21st, hosted by Brian Mackey, took home second place in the Audience Engagement category for their September show on bias in attention deficit disorder diagnosis, which looked at how symptoms of the disorder are often misdiagnosed in women and Black children. "This was a segment that really resonated with our audience," Hardwick said. "You could tell it touched people because of the revelations made in phone calls and text messages."

'Big Ag U' garners more honors

The series Big Ag U has earned another award: first place in the Small Newsroom category in the Richard H. Driehaus Foundation Awards for Investigative Reporting: Follow the Money

Illinois Public Media ag reporter Dana Cronin collaborated with Harvest Public Media and Investigate Midwest to report on the outcomes of big agriculture investment into public universities.

The Driehaus foundation supports investigative reporting that fosters greater transparency, accountability, and effectiveness in government institutions at the local level. The awards were hosted by the Better Government Association in June.

Buzard shares WILL history

Since February, Katie Buzard has been WILL's official storyteller.

As part of our centenary celebration, Buzard has taken a deep dive into WILL's history, writing monthly articles that explore a variety of station topics, milestones, and impacts. The in-depth article is posted online with a condensed version published in Patterns.

"As we planned for our 100th anniversary year, we wanted to find someone who could research and share the most important aspects of our history with all of you," said Moss Bresnahan, Illinois Public Media executive director. "Katie has done a tremendous job sharing the incredible legacy of this organization with our listeners and viewers. It also is a reminder to our staff what an important service we provide to this community."

How does one sort through 100 years of history and write an interesting, relevant article?

"The key is to divide and conquer," said Buzard, Illinois Public Media marketing and membership writer. "Approaching WILL's history by focusing on specific topics, such as music, news, and children's programming, has made the task more manageable."

Her personal connection to WILL began as a young girl. "WILL-AM was always on the radio at home and in the car growing up, and I remember rushing home from school to watch Arthur on WILL-TV," Buzard said. "I also have a distinct memory of listening to NPR in the car during the 2000 presidential election recount controversy, which I consider the moment I became aware of politics and current events. To this day, I still turn to NPR and the PBS NewsHour for my news."

In addition to working for Illinois Public Media, she is a freelance writer, who reviews classical music concerts and operas for The Chicago Classical Review, and for the last two seasons, she has written program notes for Grant Park Music Festival in Chicago. She also is a working musician who is active in the professional choral music scene in Chicago.

She enjoys running, baking, and cross-stitch, a hobby she picked up during the pandemic.

Schofield joins local ATC team

Kimberly Schofield joined Illinois Public Media in June as a local host for All Things Considered.

"All Things Considered is an important news resource," Schofield said. "I believe the authenticity and quality of the stories and the broadcasts are unparalleled. I'm excited to be back on the air and to be a part of this important news program."

Schofield will host All Things Considered Monday, Tuesday, and Thursday evenings on WILL-AM 580 and FM 90.9.

"Kimberly Schofield is a longtime member of the community and veteran news anchor. Her soothing voice will help ease the ride home for people who need a quick wrap-up of the day's headlines and evening forecast at 4, 5 and 6 pm," said Reginald Hardwick, director of news and public affairs at Illinois Public Media.

"At WDWS, I interviewed people for local stories, wrote and edited local stories, and hosted newscasts," said Schofield, a 2011 University of Illinois graduate. "Hosting was my favorite part about that job, and I am fortunate to have that opportunity here at WILL."

Her earliest memory of public media was watching performances on PBS. "I loved the authenticity of everything that went into the productions and the programming."

She has participated in a lot of local theatre and short films. She was in the half-time commercial "With Illinois" that featured kittens in an office.

"(The kittens) were the real stars and I was fortunate enough to work at the Champaign County Humane Society at the time, and I cast them in the ad," she said.

She also was president of the a cappella group No Strings Attached at Illinois. She loves running and has participated in multiple distance races, including four marathons in Disney World.

Thank you, Program Underwriters!
