June 2022 Volume XLVII, Number 12

As the official start of summer, we thought June would be the perfect month to debut our new locally produced documentary County Fair. The story is centered around the 2021 Champaign County Fair, but it's really a universal look at a cultural touchpoint of our region and the grit and family legacies that drive those involved. Once again, I am blown away by the production value and powerful local storytelling, and I am excited for all of you to see this film.

County Fair also is a beautiful addition to our extensive library of local documentaries. I hope you've had a chance to revisit some of those local productions through our Doc-u-Monday series, a monthly re-broadcast of local favorites in celebration of our 100th anniversary. It's an excellent reminder of our longstanding commitment to local filmmaking.

Speaking of our 100th anniversary celebrations, we've spent a lot of time looking into the past, but we remain focused on our future. We are a forward-funded organization as many of you already know, and the end of June marks the end of our fiscal year. This means whatever donations we have on June 30 directly impact our programming and production options for the next 12 months.

As we send Patterns off to print, we still have another $200,000 to raise to make our goal for the end of our fiscal year. If you are due for renewal or are able to make an additional gift right now at willgive.org, it would be greatly appreciated. With your help, we can plan for short-term and long-term success as your local public media station.

Local doc features people, culture of the county fair

County fairs are a staple of Illinois summers with the Coles County Fair, which began in 1841, being the oldest continuous county fair in Illinois. A new documentary from Illinois Public Media, County Fair, traces the history, culture, and importance of this summer tradition. The film premieres at 8 pm Monday, June 13.

"My mom was an agricultural reporter for The News-Gazette," said Sarah Edwards, producer and director of County Fair.

"When we were young, she took my twin sister and I with her when she covered the county fair. Over the years, we got to know the people from all aspects of the fair. I had the idea of revisiting the fair and trying to somehow document the warm and wonderful aspects of what the fair is and what it represents.

Special education teacher Alison Rappleyea is one of the most award-winning seamstresses at the fair.

French fry impresario Jim Cullers rolls his business from one Illinois fair to the next.

"The people who visit the fair rarely think about the people who put so much of themselves into this kind of event. So County Fair is really meant to shine a light on their lives. The film also highlights the importance of fairs and a bit of their history, but the focus really is on the people and their love for what they do and its importance in their lives."

The documentary follows a seamstress, a demolition derby driver, a circus performer, two sisters who show cows, and a French fry vendor from the 2021 Champaign County Fair. The film offers footage of fairs from yesteryear and highlights funny ads and stories from fairs in the 1900s.

County Fair was created by Edwards along with producer and editor DJ Roach, and cinematographer Isaac Musgrave. Taylor Plantan is the production assistant; Lillie Duncanson is executive producer.

Fifteen-year-old twin sisters Mara and Meg Turner are up before dawn every day preparing their heifers for showing at fairs across the country.

A British Hotel in the heart of Italy?

Hotel Portofino is a new historical drama set in the 1920s on the Italian Riviera. Premiering at 7 pm Sunday, June 19, it revolves around the daughter of a wealthy industrialist who heads to the breathtakingly beautiful resort town of Portofino, Italy, to set up a quintessentially British Hotel. Boasting a great cast and fabulous locations, Hotel Portofino is a family drama full of emotional highs and lows, with a classic mystery woven throughout, and building to a dramatic climax.

Endeavour begins eighth season

Season 8 of Endeavour on MASTERPIECE features a new year (it's 1971), new cases, and new struggles ahead for Morse, Thursday, and their team. While still reeling from the events of the past year, they're summoned to investigate cases involving IRA relations, and a string of murders that may end up threatening not just the public, but the detectives themselves. Season 8 begins at 8 pm Sunday, June 19. And for a retrospective of the first seven seasons, watch Endeavour: The Evolution at 9:33 pm Sunday, June 12.

Broadchurch provides emotional whodunit

The British crime drama series Broadchurch makes its WILL broadcast premiere at 10 pm Sunday, June 19. The series begins with the murder of an 11-year-old boy in the close-knit coastal town of Broadchurch in Dorset, United Kingdom. One by one the local residents are drawn into the police inquiry as Detective Inspector Alec Hardy (David Tennant) and Detective Sergeant Ellie Miller (Olivia Colman) slowly unravel secrets and discover the truth. Praised for its emotional depth and complex characters, the series explores the devastating effects of grief, mutual suspicion, and the glare of the media spotlight. Broadchurch premieres at 10 pm Sunday, June 19.

A family reunites in '10 sisters'

In celebration of WILL's centennial year, we are revisiting some of our most popular and acclaimed locally produced documentaries. This month, 10 Sisters: A True Story airs at 8 pm Thursday, June 9 as a part of Doc-u-Monday.

The children of Glen and Ruth Waggoner had what they thought was a happy childhood despite having little in the way of material things. But in March 1942, the 10 sisters of the Waggoner family walked with their mother and father into the Coles County courthouse, and slowly realized that it was the last time their family would ever be together. The sobbing sisters were literally pulled apart and driven to different homes after a court proceeding made them wards of the state. The sisters have spent the last 65 years regaining the closeness they once shared. This popular Illinois Public Media documentary by Tim Hartin pairs the tragic story of their childhood loss with the triumphant story of their work to become a family again.

ILLINOIS
AGENCY

Programs on WILL Radio are partially sponsored by a grant from the Illinois Arts Council, a state agency.

‘Hot Farm’ looks at environmental agriculture

Airing at 8 pm Sunday, June 26, on WILL-AM, Hot Farm takes a look at climate change and our food supply. The documentary is based on a new podcast from the Food & Environment Reporting Network and hosted by Eve Abrams.

“I’m really excited to bring Hot Farm to the WILL audience,” said WILL-AM Ag Reporter Dana Cronin, who produced the program. “Climate change is such a complicated issue to report on, especially within the agriculture industry, but Hot Farm does a great job of focusing on solutions. I hope listeners come away feeling inspired and hopeful about the potential we have to change.”

Among the people you’ll meet is an Illinois farmer who changed the way he farmed as a way to break free of a system that pushes farmers to only produce commodity crops and sell those crops to a handful of big buyers who set the prices. We also meet some farmers who are still raising commodity crops and remain unconvinced that how they farm is contributing to climate change.

But as Cronin explains, farmers are practical above all else. A farmer-led initiative called Saving Tomorrow’s Agriculture Resources appeals to that practicality by changing farming practices in ways that safeguard the soil — the foundation of a farmer’s livelihood — for the next generation to farm. Many of these practices also help reduce carbon emissions.

Youth tell their stories of mental illness

Hiding in Plain Sight follows the journeys of more than 20 young Americans from all over the country and all walks of life, who have struggled with thoughts and feelings that have troubled and, at times, overwhelmed them. They share what they have learned about themselves, their families, and the world in which they live. Through first-person accounts, this two-part, four-hour film, presents an unflinching look at both the seemingly insurmountable obstacles faced by those who live with mental disorders and the hope that many have found after that storm. In the process, they will directly confront the issues of stigma, discrimination, awareness, and silence, and, in doing so, support the ongoing shift in the public perception of mental illness today. Hiding in Plain Sight airs at 8 pm Monday, June 27, and at 8 pm Tuesday, June 28. Ken Burns is the executive producer.

A trusted source for local news, analysis

By Katie Buzard

Today, those in central Illinois often look to WILL as a trusted source of local, state, and national news. But news wasn't always a main focus of WILL. Sure, early broadcasts featured headlines from the Associated Press, campus announcements, and Illini sports results, but the news coverage was certainly not the in-depth, multimedia resource we rely on today.

Illinois students get real-world experience at WILL in 1950.

When WILL first came on air 100 years ago, it was conceived as an educational radio station — an extension of the University of Illinois' mission as a land grant institution to make high-quality education accessible to more Illinoisians than ever before. Keeping informed about current events and public affairs is certainly one component of being an educated citizen, but classroom lectures were still the bread and butter of the "University of the Air" through the 1940s.

This began to change after World War II. The School of Journalism introduced undergraduate and graduate curricula in radio in 1945-1946. In 1950, the School of Journalism underwent numerous structural changes, becoming the School of Journalism and Communications, with divisions of journalism, advertising, and radio. At the same time, WILL was diversifying its programming as its airtime expanded. In the fall of that same year, WILL established a proper news department, bringing on Donald E. Brown, assistant professor of journalism, to be its first director. Brown divided his time equally between WILL and the School of Journalism and Communications, where he continued to teach courses in radio news. Brown planned to increase local news coverage and extend cooperation between WILL and The Daily Illini. Director of University Broadcasting Robert Hudson said that WILL had always presented news, but this move would "regularize" it.

Professors from the university worked alongside students and WILL staff in the news department. This relationship between the School of Journalism and Communications (now the College of Media) and WILL was integral to both institutions' success. WILL benefited by having renowned journalism scholars and experienced professionals on staff, and students benefited by being able to use WILL as a laboratory to learn the practical skills of broadcasting. In fact, before the School of Journalism offered formal instruction in broadcasting, students and faculty gained their first broadcasting experience at WILL, learning announcing, dramatics, engineering, music presentation, newscasting, and script writing. This cooperation continued after the School of Journalism expanded its curriculum, and the relationship between the College of Media and Illinois Public Media persists to this day, with the Illinois Student Newsroom at IPM, joint courses, and internship opportunities providing students with vital experience.

Local screening sparks discussion on racial equity in education

The local screening of a documentary film about a 1963 civil rights demonstration sparked a lively discussion on contemporary issues around race and education.

Public school teachers, University of Illinois students, parents, and filmmakers were among those at Illinois Public Media's Reel Midwest Film Festival screening of '63 Boycott in April at the Spurlock Museum of World Cultures on campus.

'63 Boycott, from Kartemquin Films, tells the story of 250,000 Chicagoans who fought for racial equity in schools and how the struggle continues throughout the nation. After watching the 30-minute film, audience members asked questions of a panel that consisted of filmmakers Gordon Quinn and Rachel Dickson; Asif Wilson, University of Illinois assistant professor of curriculum and instruction; and Imani Bazzell, director of Sisternet. Kimberlie Kranich, director of community content and engagement at Illinois Public Media, facilitated the discussion.

"We are reaching new audiences with our Reel Midwest Film Festival events," Kranich said. "For this event, we had public school teachers and college students who want to do better by students. We provided them with information they can use and connected them with each other. This makes for a stronger democracy."

Reel Midwest was originally IPM's independent film series, which sought to find and showcase the best feature, documentary, and short films from Illinois and across the Midwest. It is now the Reel Midwest Film Festival series, which focuses on bringing these powerful films out into the community.

The event was a collaboration between Illinois Public Media, Media and Cinema Studies at the University of Illinois, Illinois Community Media Project, and the Spurlock Museum of World Cultures.

SHARE YOUR STORY

Our 100th anniversary is more than a date; it is a once in a lifetime opportunity to share WILL's amazing story with everyone. We hope you'll join us in celebrating this centennial by sharing your own WILL stories and memories at will.illinois.edu/will100/shareyourstory.

"Greetings from the banks of the Wabash! When I saw the date, I just had to write you a fan letter congratulating you on completing your first century of broadcasting! I'm very proud of the small part I played in the station's history. I did news as a student 1975-76, and later in 1976, I joined the staff as a full-time employee. When Weekday 580, the local forerunner of Morning Edition debuted Dec. 1, 1977, with David Inge and Janet Bond as co-hosts, I was honored to serve as their newscaster. I had the supreme pleasure of hosting Morning Edition from 1981-88, and then did a stint hosting the Afternoon Magazine 1988-89. It was great to work with David and Janet, Dan Simeone, Don Mullally, Kirk Melhuish, Ed Kieser, and other great broadcasters too numerous to list! I look back on my WILL years as the best years of my life. ... Keep up the great work!!"

U of I, WILL alum on covering Ukraine

Terrell Jermaine Starr is covering the war in Ukraine from the frontlines as an independent journalist. The University of Illinois alumnus visited campus recently sharing his experiences with journalism students as well as talking with guest host Tinisha Spain on The 21st on WILL-AM.

"We're thankful that Starr took time during his campus visit to share his experiences with our listeners," said Reginald Hardwick, director of news and public affairs at Illinois Public Media. "We could have probably extended the show by two hours to hear more of Starr's personal and professional journeys. He shared experiences and perspective about what Ukrainians think about Russia's invasion of their country. He was generous to answer the questions from listeners who called. And he was candid about his identity as a Black American journalist in a country where few natives have regular contact with Black men and women."

Jim Meadows mentored Starr when he was a student journalist in the WILL newsroom in 2008. "Student interns come to WILL at varying skill levels," Meadows said. "Terrell Starr came to us as a master's student. He adapted quickly to our routine, just as he has adapted to the much more challenging task of reporting in Ukraine."

Starr earned master's degrees in Russian, East European, and Eurasian studies and in journalism from the University of Illinois Urbana-Champaign.
