august 2015 Volume XLIII, Number 2

One observation that's become quite clear over the 11 months I've been heading up Illinois Public Media...being part of any university community can make you feel young or old, depending on the day. One thing is for certain: while we're in the traditional role of instructing students, they have a lot to teach us.

That's why I'm excited about our newest internship program with the U of I College of Media, which you can learn more about on page 17. In addition to offering opportunities for these journalism students to collaborate alongside reporters in the Illinois Public Media Newsroom, we're benefiting from their insight about how they and their peers access news—both in the platforms they use and the sources they rely on. As a dual NPR-PBS affiliate, this information is vital for the future of our industry.

In fact, a recent Pew Research Center survey of consumers' media habits underscored that public media needs to do a better job of connecting with the youngest millennials. The study found that NPR was the most popular public media source among millennials, but it also had the lowest name recognition. Roughly 61 percent of millennials reported getting political news on Facebook in a given week, in stark contrast to Internet-using baby boomers, for whom local TV tops the list of sources for political news at nearly the same reach (60 percent).

It's a brave new media world, and we intend to be a leader in it. Stay tuned for some big announcements in the months ahead. We're thankful to have your dedication and generosity to help us get there.

A different slice of life story

▲ On the road in New Hampshire

Imagine a “pie shed” in Vermont that is open 24/7 so you can get a cherry pie in the wee hours. Consider a slice of sugar cream pie, Indiana’s official state pie. Or think about a fresh apple pie at a California fruit stand. These are just some of the joys to be found in A Few Good Pie Places, a new program from PBS and Rick Sebak, producer of more than 35 documentaries, including Breakfast Special, A Hot Dog Special, A Ride Along the Lincoln Highway, and Great Old Amusement Parks.

A Few Good Pie Places—airing at 7 pm Tuesday, Aug. 25—is a combination food show and travelogue, and a portrait of some of the men and women in the United States who care about creating good dough and zesty fillings from coconut cream to wild huckleberries.

Sebak and his three-person crew started filming in their hometown of Pittsburgh, then drove to the Midwest, to New England, and to central Virginia, near the town of Elon, where they got to sample some of the fried pies at Woodruff’s Pie Shop and Café. They eventually flew to California, Washington and Montana for more.

They met and talked with bakers and eaters in all of these places:

- Portage Pie, Westfield, N.Y.
- Ikeda’s Market, Auburn, Calif.
- Two Fat Cats Bakery, Portland, Maine
- Grant Bar & Restaurant, Millvale, Pa.
- Poorhouse Pies, Underhill, Vt.
- A La Mode Pies, Seattle
- Nick’s Kitchen, Huntington, Ind.
- Lisa’s Pies, Atlanta, Ind.
- Rolling Pin Bakehouse, near Roanoke, Ind.
- Pie Lady On 5, South Whitley, Ind.
- Loula’s Café, Whitefish, Mont.
- Braham Pie Day, Braham, Minn.

It’s followed at 8:15 pm by another new Sebak program, A Few Great Bakeries.

The first pledge drive of the new fiscal year is coming Aug. 22-30. In preparation for the 25th anniversary rebroadcast of The Civil War coming in September, our pledge program lineup features a new behind-the-scenes look at how the award-winning documentary came to be and how it became an icon of American storytelling. Ken Burns: The Civil War features interviews with Burns and others involved in the landmark series. It airs at 5 pm Saturday, Aug. 22, with repeats at 8:30 pm Monday, Aug. 24, and 1 pm Sunday, Aug. 30.

Then at 10 pm Saturday, Aug. 22, Simon & Garfunkel: The Concert in Central Park is the unforgettable 1981 performance that reunited the duo to raise funds to restore the world's most famous urban park. They perform all of their greatest hits, as well as selections from their solo careers, backed by an 11-person band. The program repeats at 5 pm Sunday, Aug. 23.

And at 6:30 pm Sunday, Aug. 23, join PBS president Paula Kerger as she hosts Downton Abbey Rediscovered, a combination of video clips, interviews with writer Julian Fellowes, producer Gareth Neame and all cast

Joyce DiDonato and Juan Diego Flórez headline Rossini's bel canto tour-de-force La Donna del Lago on Great Performances at the Met at 8 pm Friday, Aug. 7, on WILL-TV.

In this classic based on the work by Sir Walter Scott, DiDonato sings the title role of Elena, the lady of the lake pursued by two men, with Flórez in the role of Giacomo, the benevolent king of Scotland.

Michele Mariotti, last featured in the Great Performance at the Met broadcast of Rigoletto, conducts debuting Scottish director Paul Curran's staging, a co-production with Santa Fe Opera. The cast also includes Daniela Barcellona in the role of Malcolm, John Osborn as Rodrigo, and Oren Gradus as Duglas.

Programs on WILL Radio are partially sponsored by a grant from the Illinois Arts Council, a state agency.

A Way with Words comes to WILL-AM

This weekly, national, one-hour caller-based program about language airs at 10 am Fridays on WILL-AM 580, with a repeat at 8 pm the same day.

Author Martha Barnette and lexicographer Grant Barrett take calls about slang, grammar, linguistic heirlooms, old sayings, word origins, regional dialects and family expressions, along with speaking and writing well.

By looking at the world through the lens of language, A Way with Words offers a new perspective on politics, pop culture, history, sports, music, science, literature and foreign cultures.

It's a positive, information-based look at what is really happening with all aspects of modern language and communication, using anecdotes, culture, relationships, and families as starting points. There's a lot of first-hand, primary research and professional language experience that informs the dialogue. It's of high value to native and non-native speakers alike, including ESL and ELT teachers and students.

Listen to past episodes and join in the program's online discussion forum at waywordradio.org.

After replacing our aged-out radio automation system in June, WILL engineering, operations, news and FM staff were trained on the new automation system by Owen Mekitarian (far right, at computer) from Broadcast Electronics. The company, based in Quincy, Ill., is the largest radio-only broadcast equipment manufacturer in the United States.

Scientists, filmmakers, photographers, animal behaviorists and other experts will come together in Big Blue Live to document the rejuvenation of the once endangered and now thriving ecosystem of Monterey Bay National Marine Sanctuary in California. PBS and BBC are partnering to present the three-part live event that begins at 7 pm Monday, Aug. 31.

The program is specifically timed to capture a once-a-year confluence of some of the world's most charismatic marine creatures—humpback whales, blue whales, sea lions, dolphins, elephant seals, sea otters, great white sharks, shearwaters, and brown pelicans—in Monterey Bay.

Four correspondents will report from the Monterey Bay Aquarium and from aboard research vessels of the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration's National Marine Sanctuaries.

Newsroom welcomes more interns

A new internship program for U of I College of Media journalism students is immersing three undergrads in multimedia reporting methods in the Illinois Public Media newsroom this summer.

The idea came from Lilyan Levant, publisher and general manager of Illini Media Company, which includes the Daily Illini, WPGU, Buzz Magazine, Technograph and Illio yearbook. Levant got positive feedback from College of Media professors about the viability of the concept before reaching out to IPM News Director Scott Cameron and also to The News-Gazette.

“This is an extension of the hands-on, experiential learning opportunities the Daily Illini is here to offer students,” Lilyan said. “As the DI scales back during the summer months, it’s important to still have great local opportunities available to complement the internship offers our students receive from across the country.”

As traditional print forms of journalism continue to add components of audio, video and social media to expand timeliness and reach, the Daily Illini’s partnership with Illinois Public Media broadens each student’s range of professional reporting skills. And this fall, each of the three students will share what they’ve learned with their DI colleagues.

“Senait, Masaki and Dan have been out covering stories and working alongside reporters in the IPM newsroom,” Scott said. “They’re learning how to report for radio and online, and we’re able to serve our audience with stories we wouldn’t be able to get to otherwise. It’s been a great experiment and I hope it’s a model for future years.”

The students agree that the internship is valuable. Each of them has told Lilyan that they’re enjoying the work and feel very much a part of the news team at IPM.

“They say it’s added a lot to what they’ve learned, plus it’s definitely enhanced their future career potential to say they have worked at an NPR affiliate station,” she said.

DCA: Looking back and ahead

One year after joining the Digital Convergence Alliance (DCA) with 10 other public television stations, WILL considers the forward-thinking move a success and is looking at next steps.

“Our goal was for WILL-TV viewers to not see any disruptions in programming with the change to being part of this new master control hub,” said Bob Culkeen, interim chief operations officer. “We have achieved that and are delivering a stable quality product with few technical interruptions in service and good value for operating the system.”

The change was needed to solve issues related to out-of-date equipment that caused outages to WILL-TV’s signal and prevented the ability to air programs in full HD all the time. So when the Corporation for Public Broadcasting offered start-up funds last year to help stations combine their master control operations at a new network operations center in Jacksonville, Fla., the timing was right for WILL to proceed.

With the transition on May 15, 2014, WILL-TV’s program streams began coming from Jacksonville through a fiber-optic network.

“As part of the arrangement, WILL has 24-hour monitoring of its signal, plus a number of operational and technical efficiencies,” Bob said. “The last two stations that were part of the initial DCA group went live in July, so we now have all 11 stations up and operating.”

With that build-out complete, Bob says the DCA will now be recruiting additional client stations, which will reduce operational costs even further. Other plans for the future include discussions about shared services, such as closed captioning and perhaps also program production, as well as uncovering new ways each of the DCA stations’ strengths can be tapped for ongoing collaborations.

WILL engineers Rick Finnie and Walt Strogoff are part of the DCA engineering group that’s pooling its expertise to develop best practices for all member stations. And Lillie Buck Duncanson, WILL’s assistant director for content and continuity, has also contributed her skills to the national traffic managers group.
